

CONCLUSION

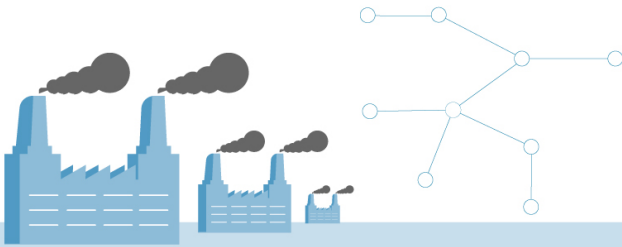

1995-2020 RECENT PAST

PRESENT

FUTURE

While its development performance has overall been quite good, the future growth perspective of the economic model of CEE might now reach its limit.

Over-specialisation in production and technological megatrends will further challenge EU-CEE economic development + convergence in the future.

Policymakers should be active in addressing these challenges and making sure opportunities of the 'second transition' are taken.

Using policy wisely will allow region to further improve living standards relative to Western Europe in 2020s and beyond.

